Description

Oil painting on canvas depicting a young girl, dressed in simple clothes and with her head covered by a scarf, sitting in an alleyway with a mandolin on her lap. The subtle play of light and shadow highlights the features of her face and the expression in her gaze, which is directed toward the top of the composition. On the right, a partially visible man appears to be holding his hat out in front of him. The direction of the young girl's gaze, combined with the man's gesture, suggests the presence of a passerby outside the pictorial frame. A signature, difficult to decipher, is visible at the bottom of the painting. Minor imperfections on the frame. Good overall condition. 19th century. Dimensions: Framed: 69.5 cm x 54.5 cm Artwork: 60 x 45 cm
