Description

A beautifully decorated set of four Chelsea House display plates produced during the 1980s, each featuring a different exotic bird study against a white ground surrounded by royal-blue and gilt ornament.

Inspired by traditional English bird-painted porcelain, the plates combine strong colour, elegant gilding and carefully executed bird studies. Their design draws on the Chelsea bird tradition, eighteenth-century decorative ceramics and Chinese Export influences, creating pieces with both classical inspiration and contemporary decorative appeal.

The birds are individually characterised and confidently painted, while the rich blue borders provide strong visual contrast. Displayed together, the four plates create a highly decorative
