Description

A distinctive English mirror from the mid-19th century, crafted from solid walnut. It features a warm, natural patina and a simple, authentic silhouette typical of Victorian rural craftsmanship. The frame bears some old signs of woodworm damage, which have been treated and are now stabilized. These marks contribute to the piece's authentic charm without detracting from it. The mirror's surface displays subtle signs of age, including slight oxidation and a few irregularities, giving it the softness and character sought after by collectors for original 19th-century glass. The combination of warm walnut and the delicately patinated mirror creates a timeless and understated presence, ideal for both classic and contemporary interiors. A refined and rustic example of British craftsmanship from
