Description

Medieval iron dagger - Second half of the 15th century - From RotterdamRare medieval dagger dating from the second half of the 15th century.This interesting edged weapon comes from a former Dutch collection and was discovered in Rotterdam in the mid-1960s during construction work on the city's subway system.Forged from iron, it features a sturdy, thick single-edged blade. Its hilt is remarkably well-preserved and still retains its original wooden grip, now petrified--a feature rarely preserved on this type of archaeological object.The item is in good condition, completely stable, with a beautiful antique patina attesting to its authenticity and age.Total length: 30.4 cm.This dagger is a fine example of late medieval weaponry, illustrating both the skill of the cutlers
