Description

A charming red chalk portrait of a young boy, turned slightly to the right, with curly hair, looking at something or someone, his eyes wide open, with an innocent expression. He has a small, well-defined mouth. The edge of a draped cloth surrounds his neck. France, late 18th or early 19th century, Neoclassical. A light green Marie Louise mount, in watercolor, frames the drawing, which is outlined in dark brown ink. The entire piece is original. A water stain in the upper left corner, which barely touches the hair.
