Description

A lovely early 19th-century blown opaline goblet or vase, white in color with transparent oval motifs etched into the glass; decorated with delicate small flowers painted in a subtle style, this opaline piece, set on a sky-blue crystal base, is highly decorative with its circular, flared base forming the foot. A complex piece showcasing the skillful combination of two materials layered for added elegance and refinement; it can serve as a small vase or a night glass. This lovely Italian-influenced piece is a beautiful curiosity in good condition, luminous and decorative. Circa 1830 (Louis Philippe). A goblet of great beauty...
