Description

This charming oil painting on canvas, created in the second half of the 19th century and bearing a partially preserved signature "W....ce", represents a fine example of a European romantic landscape. The canvas reveals an idyllic pastoral scene to the viewer, as a small river unhurriedly carries its waters under the arches of an old stone bridge. The artist masterfully constructs the perspective, guiding the viewer's gaze from the foreground, where a mother and daughter walking along the road encounter a traveler resting on a log, far into the distance towards a cozy thatched cottage surrounded by mighty trees, and further to the very horizon. Skillfully employing a harmoniously balanced palette, the painter conveys the poetic atmosphere of a summer day. Soft rays of light breaking through the clouds
