Description

This impressive pair of marble pedestals, dating from the late 18th century, is richly decorated and carved in the form of classical columns. Inspired by the architectural vocabulary of antiquity, these elegant pedestals combine noble materials, harmonious proportions, and the timeless charm of the neoclassical style.Crafted from marble with beautifully weathered surfaces, the columns feature a rich patina developed over more than two centuries. Their architectural character makes them ideal supports for busts, sculptures, urns, or significant decorative objects, while also serving as striking standalone elements in refined interiors.The understated elegance of their design reflects the taste for classical forms that dominated European decorative arts in the late 18th century. Their imposing size and period
