Description

An interesting oil on canvas mounted on a wooden panel depicting the triumph of Silenus.A beautiful scene of Bacchanalia filled with numerous figures:Silenus appears wearing a wreath of vine leaves, holding a cup, and riding an ox.He is surrounded by Bacchantes and satyrs dancing and playing musical instruments, all set against a bucolic landscape.This oil on canvas is vibrant in color and is also unique due to its oval shape.The figures' features are lightly sketched, as if this were a preparatory study for a larger painting.The canvas is in good condition and has a few small areas of missing paint on the angel at the top of the composition in the sky.The canvas has been mounted on a wooden panel.It is presented in a lovely Napoleon III-style stucco and gilded wood frame decorated with ribbons
