Description

A charming, finely executed portrait of a court lady from the early 17th century. This remarkable and expressive oil on a well-prepared oak panel reveals all its subtlety and uniqueness; this late Renaissance figure is depicted in three-quarter profile with a distant gaze; she has roses in her hair and a fine pearl ornament across her forehead, dressed in dark green with a fur collar, she seems frozen in time... Small in size yet commanding in presence, this high-quality painting has everything to appeal to a lover of old master paintings; it is a finely detailed and meticulously executed work from around 1610, in very good condition; a page of history, this charming painting is in perfect original condition, unretouched, set in its gilded frame with wide molding...
