Description

An elegant Louis XV-era dressing table in rosewood veneer, decorated with geometric scrollwork. It stands on four curved legs and features three drawers on the front.The drop-down top reveals a compartmentalized interior that retains its original floral-patterned fabric, as well as a central mirror. The piece features meticulous marquetry work on the top, drawers, and sides.This charming ladies' dressing table perfectly illustrates the refinement of 18th-century French furniture, both through the elegance of its lines and the quality of its veneer, as well as the presence of its original interior fittings.
