Description

A unique and highly decorative cigar cutter, inspired by a traditional guillotine, dating from the 1940s. Made of wood and brass, this charming object combines functionality, mechanical ingenuity, and the whimsical character often found in luxury smoking accessories of that era. The miniature guillotine faithfully reproduces the shape of the historic instrument of execution, with a functional cutting mechanism adapted for cigar preparation. These original cigar cutters were highly prized by gentlemen and cigar enthusiasts, serving both as practical accessories and conversation pieces. The warm tones of the wood contrast elegantly with the brass fittings, creating an attractive decorative object that will look equally at home on a desk, in a bar, a smoking room, or a cabinet of curiosities.
