Description

: A fine 19th-century Japanese sculpture, carved from bone, depicting a grape seller carrying his wares. Rich in detail and full of character, this sculpture attests to the exceptional craftsmanship and attention to detail in the depiction of everyday subjects--qualities that have made Japanese sculptures highly sought-after by collectors worldwide.The figure is rendered with remarkable precision, from the expressive facial features and the fluid drape of the clothing to the bunches of grapes and the finely carved accessories. The sculptor has captured a vivid scene from daily life, infusing the composition with movement and personality.Signed by the artist, this piece exemplifies the artistic refinement associated with Japanese sculptural traditions of the late Edo and Meiji periods, a
