Description

A charming 19th-century bronze sculpture depicting a seated lion, one of the most iconic symbols of strength, vigilance, royalty, and courage in European decorative arts. Although modest in size, the sculpture possesses a remarkable presence and elegantly captures the animal's nobility.The lion is depicted in a seated posture, calm and dignified, with finely modeled facial features, a detailed mane, and well-defined musculature. The sculptor succeeds in expressing the power and serenity traditionally associated with the king of beasts, creating a work that is both decorative and expressive.The bronze has acquired a beautiful patina over time, enhancing the depth of the modeling and highlighting the quality of the casting. Its compact dimensions make it an ideal piece for display on a desk, a
