Description

A Napoleon III-era gilded bronze mantelpiece, resting on four legs and adorned with rich neoclassical decoration inspired by the Louis XVI style. The structure is embellished with slender fluted columns, beaded garlands, chiseled frames, and a remarkable pediment crowned with a laurel wreath accompanied by decorative attributes. The central panel features a delicate Aubusson tapestry with a pastoral scene depicting a young woman in a rural landscape, framed by a floral border in the style of 18th-century compositions. The finesse of the bronze work, the elegance of the proportions, and the quality of the textile decoration attest to the refinement of Second Empire Parisian productions intended for bourgeois and aristocratic interiors. A beautiful decorative piece that can be placed in front of a
