Description

A superb and rare Dutch oak display cabinet, dated 1771. A magnificent example of Dutch craftsmanship. This elegant display cabinet with beveled edges features two solid doors in the lower section and two glass doors concealing three shelves in the upper section. It is rare to find display cabinets with doors in the lower section, which can be practical for storing tableware or other items. The cornice is adorned with a boar. The shelves are decorated with a scalloped pattern. The display cabinet rests on ball feet. It is in perfect condition and boasts a magnificent patina. Exceptional quality.
