Description

A curious little drinking horn with a silver band, likely made from a ram's horn, early 19th century. The silver mount bears the name "JUAN FERMIN 2d AGURTO" around the neck, and at the tip, it is engraved with a cursive "E," accompanied by a square symbol. The horn is very thin and translucent, barely 1 mm thick. No hallmark is visible on the mount; a small silver chain connects the neck to the tip, and a flat base allows it to stand upright. Engraved round and spiral patterns adorn the body of the object. Its small size suggests it was a gift for a birth or a "Communion"; the surname Agurto is found mainly in Latin America, particularly in Chile... In very good condition with normal signs of use; the object is watertight. Length: 12.5 cm; width: 6 cm; height: 10.6 cm Weight = 134 grams Extremely
