Description

A beautifully decorated Wedgwood Fairyland Lustre bowl produced in England circa 1920. The bowl displays a rich mottled green exterior with emerald, olive and violet iridescent tones, decorated with gilded butterfly motifs and Greek Key ornament.

The Mother-of-Pearl Lustre interior is centred by a finely painted exotic bird, creating a striking contrast with the deep green exterior. The original mark and pattern number have largely worn away, although the decoration suggests a relationship to the documented Z4831 design. Designed under the direction of Daisy Makeig-Jones, Fairyland Lustre remains among the most celebrated decorative achievements of twentieth-century Wedgwood. The iridescent surfaces change dramatically under different
