

Diane Of Gabies,

480 EUR

Period : 19th century

Condition : Bon état

Material : Bronze

Width : 9,8

Height : 28

Depth : 8,6

Description

Diane de Gabies An elegant bronze sculpture with a nuanced brown patina depicting the goddess Artemis adjusting her wide-sleeved chiton, based on the ancient marble sculpture attributed to Praxiteles (some wear due of age). The plaque marked "Ré ion Sauvage" refers to Réduction Sauvage, a technique for reducing bronze sculptures developed by Frédéric Sauvage (1786-1857). On a sea-green marble base. 19th century. Good condition. Discovered in 1792 on Prince Borghese's estate at Gabies, not far from Rome, this antique was sold by the prince to Napoleon in 1807. In the 19th century, the statue enjoyed great popularity, and copies were installed in numerous locations, such as the Cour Carrée at the Louvre, the Athenaeum Club in London, and the Botanical Gardens in

Dealer

Cléry Antiques

18th century furnitures and fine art objects

Tel : 0689602398

Mobile : 06 89 60 23 98

86 rue de Cléry

Paris 75002

Copenhagen. It is now housed at the Louvre
Museum in Paris. Height of the bronze: 25.5
cm Total height: 28 cm