Description

This charming early 19th-century bathers, depicted near a body of water and wrapped in her bath towel, reveals a graceful back. This oil on painted cardboard panel, framed with a gilded cornice featuring volutes at the corners, is in the First Empire style; the frame is a period-appropriate, coated wooden barretted frame. The scene is beautifully rendered within a natural landscape. A beautiful painting monogrammed "A. R." in the lower left corner, this highly skilled and academic work embodies the "Neoclassical" spirit; the young woman's hair is styled in an antique-inspired bun adorned with flowers. A delicate, masterful, decorative, and sensual work with beautiful colors and a delicate touch, circa 1815. Reasonable price for this beautiful painting
