Description

Two imposing decorative planters dating from the 1920s, made of cast concrete, featuring a well-defined ribbed body and a decorative rim. Their generous, balanced proportions give them a strong presence without being overpowering. Each planter is deep enough to accommodate a small tree or a large shrub, making them ideal for framing an entrance, a walkway, or a patio. Despite being over a century old, their design remains sleek and contemporary, with a simplicity that fits equally well in both traditional and modern gardens.
