Description

This watercolor was painted in the late 18th or early 19th century, most likely based on an engraving depicting the famous painting by Anthony van Dyck (1599-1641), The Crowning with Thorns. This harrowing scene of Christ's suffering is often depicted; here, it is rendered in a particularly intricate manner, featuring numerous figures all participating in the torment. The artist who created this watercolor has mastered both anatomy--the figures are rendered without weakness--and architecture, which is particularly meticulous. This lovely work, unsigned, is indicative of the painters' impeccable training and makes a beautiful devotional object. Visible dimensions of the drawing: 32 cm x 25 cm
