Description

This modular bookshelf is in the style of Mathieu Matégot, the pioneering designer known for his innovative use of perforated metal in the 1950s-1960s. Crafted from white-lacquered perforated steel, it features stackable cubic modules with square perforations, echoing Matégot's signature blend of industrial precision and airy elegance. The flat metal feet and open-frame design ensure stability while maintaining a light, sculptural presence.

Not an original Matégot piece, this bookshelf faithfully captures the modular versatility and retro-futuristic charm of his iconic works. Ideal for collectors of Mid-Century Modern design, it pairs seamlessly with wood, glass, or ceramic decor, adding a touch of French industrial sophistication to any interior.
