Description

Patinated plaster sculpture, Ultimo sospiro, signed, 1957This sculpture, imbued with intense drama, is a clear expression of post-World War II Expressionism.Signed on the base: T. OneIn particular, those interested in Existentialism (Sartre, Camus) will find in this sculpture a plastic translation of the sense of disorientation and search for meaning typical of that philosophy.The style evokes the work of artists such as Alberto Giacometti and Munch, due to the extreme fragility of the figures, and the visceral approach of sculptors of the era such as Marino Mazzacurati, Auguste Rodin, and Francis Bacon.The work belongs to that artistic movement which, in the period following 1945, sought to give form to the existential anguish and collective trauma left by the conflict.Dimensions:
