Description

A Louis XVI-style console table, crafted in the late 19th century. Featuring a white marble top framed by a gilded, openwork brass rail, this piece has a central niche with a mirrored back adorned with two freestanding columns. Three drawers are located in the lower section, flanked by quarter-round shelves with brass-plated trim. A key serves as the handle and also operates the three locks. A charming piece with elegant lines, in very good condition. We note a small hairline crack on the marble that does not affect its appearance (not visible in the photo).
