Description

Francois Louis Couché (1782-1849) Design with cartouche for "Trophies of the French Armies" " Ink drawing enhanced with white gouache Dimensions: 13 x 18.5 cm Condition: good condition, a slight central crease, small stains. Unsigned but consistent with his style; see the example engraving. FRANÇOIS-LOUIS COUCHÉ, who signed as Couché fils, a student of Louis Lafitte in drawing and of his father in engraving, was born in Paris in 1782. He engraved much more than his father, but his major works--Balailles de l'Empire (based on Swebach and Duplessi-Bertaux), plates for Histoire de Napoléon by Norvins (Trophées des Armées Françaises), Voyage en Egypte, Portraits de Généraux, etc., etc., are all from after 1800 and therefore fall outside the scope of this discussion. We should, however, mention a fairly successful, though somewhat confused, reduced reproduction of the Coronation of Voltaire at the Théâtre-Français, after Moreau and Gaucher, and the Transfer of Voltaire's Ashes to the Panthéon, which serves as its counterpart; 60 plates from Monuments of Paris, after Civeton, 120 rather fine pieces for Dulaure's Sketches of the Revolution, drawn and etched by Couché fils and finished by Bovinet and Lejeune, and a rather pretty portrait of J.-J. Rousseau, after Duchesne.
