The figure of the Virgin is carved in a mother of pearl plaque, with a soft and luminous finish that subtly changes depending on the light. The representation shows the characteristic silhouette, with a recognizable profile that gives the piece a clear devotional character. The mother of pearl adds a special visual quality, with iridescent reflections that bring the piece to life without the need for color. Around the image, a gold frame decorated with natural old cut diamonds develops, arranged along the upper contour, the lateral elements and the lower section. The arrangement of the stones is balanced and well resolved, accompanying the design without overloading it. The whole is completed with ornamental motifs inspired by vegetal forms and curved shapes that create volume and movement. At the top, the bail incorporates a small additional diamond, well integrated into the design. The structure includes openwork areas, which lighten the piece visually and allow a better appreciation of the craftsmanship.
