Description

A remarkable set of six chairs and a dining table made of solid elm, designed by Luigi Gorgoni and produced by Roche Bobois in France in the 1970s. Each chair features a solid elm frame with beautifully rounded edges and subtle joinery details. The elm's natural grain has developed a warm patina, adding character and depth to the overall design. The curved backs and seats are upholstered in cognac-colored saddle leather, which has developed a rich patina over time, highlighting the age and authenticity of the set. The design strikes a harmonious balance between the integrity of the materials and minimalist geometry, making these chairs equally suited to contemporary, vintage, or rustic interiors. Comfortable, durable, and visually appealing, they serve as both functional dining chairs and
