Description

Finely painted in miniature, this charming work from the German Romantic school of the first half of the 19th century has everything to captivate. An oil on wood, set in a Louis Philippe frame with a wide cornice, barretted, and ornate moldings gilded with gold leaf, depicting a landscape where figures on foot and on horseback cross a bridge over a torrent, with a vertiginous fortified castle in the background, a work full of charm with a delicate and detailed touch in the style of the "Troubadour" school, featuring lovely tones and high quality--a curiosity brimming with childhood dreams, an inspired work, and a charming decorative painting in very good original condition (circa 1840). A beautiful set with a frame and painting that complement each other well
