Description

Abstract brass sculpture created by Lyse Oudoire in France in the 1970s. A French artist and sculptor active during the 1960s and 1970s, Lyse Oudoire developed a body of work centered on geometric forms and the balance of volumes, often crafted from polished or patinated metal. The composition consists of a rectangular base supporting two openwork cubic forms, balanced on a slender metal structure. The interplay of cutouts and solid forms creates an architectural interplay between void and matter, accentuated by the warm reflections of polished brass. France, circa 1970.
