Description

A floral Yazd rug, hand-knotted from wool in Iran around 1970-1980. It measures 122 cm wide by 192 cm long. Yazd, see map, is located halfway between Kerman and Isfahan and was once known and famous for its gold-threaded fabrics. Yazd carpets are quite rare on the European market because carpet weaving--both small and large pieces--began late in the city and was driven by necessity. Yazd was once a city of renowned textile manufacturers. With the textile market at an all-time low, the residents organized themselves to revive the tradition of carpet knotting, drawing inspiration from Kirman carpets. By enlisting the help of knotters and design drafters--known as ostads--from the Kirman region, carpet production was able to resume. Like Kirman carpets, the designs feature
