Description

Pair of Art Deco-era Console Tables in Mahogany and Lemonwood, circa 1930 A rare and elegant pair of Art Deco console tables from the 1930s, crafted from mahogany with spectacular grain and accented with lemonwood inlay. These pieces captivate with their architectural lines, typical of the Art Deco style. Each console features a rectangular top with softened corners, highlighting a magnificent symmetrical design in flamed mahogany. The solid central base rests on a molded plinth adorned with discreet metal volutes that enhance the piece's overall elegance. The clean lines, the quality of the wood, and the balanced proportions perfectly exemplify the French Art Deco aesthetic, where the nobility of the materials takes precedence over excessive
