Description

19th-Century Decorated Cast-Iron Radiator with Floral Motifs An elegant antique cast-iron radiator dating from the late 19th or early 20th century, featuring a relief design of foliage and plant motifs typical of the Belle Époque aesthetic. Composed of twelve richly ornamented sections, this radiator combines functionality with decorative quality. The delicacy of the cast decoration attests to the craftsmanship of the great French foundries of the era, which placed as much importance on ornamentation as on thermal performance. With its harmonious lines and striking architectural presence, it will naturally find its place in a historic home, a Haussmann-style apartment, a mansion, or a heritage renovation project. It can also serve as a striking decorative element in a contemporary
