Description

Flamed mahogany drop-leaf secretary desk - Louis-Philippe period, 19th century
Elegant Louis-Philippe period drop-front secretary desk in flamed mahogany, featuring remarkable symmetrical grain patterns across the entire front. It opens with an upper drawer topped by a black marble slab; a wide drop-leaf reveals a refined interior in speckled maple, featuring several small drawers and storage compartments. The lower section consists of three large drawers on the front. The locks are present. The flap is upholstered in antique black leather. The piece rests on ball-shaped legs characteristic of the period. The quality of the veneer, the richness of the grain, and the contrast between the flamed mahogany exterior and the light-colored speckled maple interior lend this
