Description

Devotional silver reliquary from the 18th century containing a relic of: Saint Donatus of Arezzo. The relic is carefully preserved beneath glass and accompanied by its original identification label. The reliquary is attractively presented within a gilt wood frame. The reverse of the reliquary displays an intact red wax episcopal seal, along with red silk threads, which assure the authenticity of the relic's ecclesiastical origin. These elements remain undisturbed, affirming the relic's preserved and original condition. The reliquary remains in well-preserved condition, retaining the devotional character and craftsmanship typical of eighteenth-century Catholic reliquaries. Its original sealing elements provide important evidence of ecclesiastical authentication and contribute to the integrity of the piece. Saint Donatus of Arezzo was a fourth-century bishop and martyr venerated as one of the principal saints of early Christian Italy. According to tradition, he served as Bishop of Arezzo during a period of persecution and became renowned for his steadfast defense of the faith, his pastoral leadership, and the miracles attributed to his intercession. He ultimately suffered martyrdom during the reign of Emperor Julian the Apostate, securing his place among the revered witnesses of the early Church.
