Description

This set of six chairs, designed by Vittorio Introini and produced by Saporiti around 1970, is a distinctive example of Italian design. The chromed metal frame lends solidity and a contemporary aesthetic, while the green fabric upholstery adds a touch of color and comfort. The chairs stand out for their combination of curved lines and modern materials, typical of 1970s furniture styles. Ideal for furnishing a living room or dining room, these chairs represent a perfect blend of functionality and vintage style. The choice of materials and ergonomic design make them suitable for both home and professional environments, offering long-lasting comfort and a striking visual presence.The item is in good condition, with minor signs of wear. We try to present the item's actual condition as accurately
