Description

A beautiful Virgin of the Seven Sorrows dating from the first half of the 19th century. This is a lovely devotional statue--and likely one used in processions--consisting of a slightly articulated wooden figure with a finely carved face, hands, and feet. The rest of the sculpture is much more rudimentary, as it was intended to be dressed. The arms are articulated. In other words, a capipote! She retains her original garments, consisting of several white petticoats over which rests a large black velvet dress and a large taffeta mantilla edged with lace. There are a few wax stains on the velvet and a few holes in the taffeta. She wears a large gilded wooden crown and has a polychrome wooden "Heart of the Seven Sorrows" on her chest. The piece as a whole is very beautiful and of fine
