Description

Pair of Biedermeier-era armchairs in light wood - 19th century
An elegant pair of Biedermeier-era armchairs in light wood, characterized by the purity of their lines and the harmonious balance of their proportions. The backrests feature a stylized lyre-shaped upper crossbar, embellished with discreet inlays that highlight the side scrolls. The curved armrests end in delicate volutes, lending suppleness and elegance to the overall design. The generously upholstered seats rest on tapered legs of great simplicity, typical of Biedermeier furniture. A turned crossbar connects the backrest posts and reinforces the structure's stability. The light wood, with its warm honey hue, highlights the refinement of the cabinetmaking and the quality of the veneers. The seats have been reupholstered with a floral striped
