18th-century George III-period Mahogany Canterbury

2 500 EUR

Period : 18th century

Condition : Très bon état

Material : Mahogany

Width : 53.5

Height : 51

Depth : 38

Description

A Stunning Late 18th-Century George III Period Mahogany Canterbury, or Magazine Rack, of Exceptional Quality and Elegant ProportionsThis finely crafted piece features four solid mahogany dividers with saddle-top profiles, beautifully accented with delicate ebony inlay throughout. The shorter side features a deep, mahogany-lined drawer, fitted with a pair of turned brass knob handles, offering practical storage while maintaining a refined profile. Additional brass knob handles at each end allow for easy movement and add a further decorative highlight.Resting on tall, slender turned legs with the original brass casters, this Canterbury moves gracefully and stands with poise. Made in England circa 1790, it remains in very good condition: structurally sound, with firm joints and

Dealer

Anthony Short Antiques

18C & 19C Fine Period Antiques, Decorative Furniture & Works of Art

Tel : 00 44 7595603348

Mobile : 00 44 7595603348

Market Square

Petworth GU28 0AH

all the reassuring integrity one expects from the finest 18th-century craftsmanship.Most notably, the surfaces remain delightfully unrestored, retaining the original finish and a superb, warm patina on the mahogany. Pieces of this age and quality, preserved in such authentic condition, are increasingly difficult to find. The rich color, depth of tone, and gentle signs of age give it a timeless allure and a palpable sense of history.Equally at home in a traditional period interior or as a statement piece in a contemporary setting, this George III Canterbury offers both function and character, serving as a distinguished focal point for any discerning collector or stylish home.