Description

An elegant hard-paste porcelain plate from the Royal Porcelain Manufactory of Sèvres, produced during the reign of Louis-Philippe and dated 1849. With a contoured shape and scalloped decoration, it features in its center a delicate polychrome composition of fruits and flowers, painted with great refinement: blooming roses, wildflowers, plums, and apricots come together to form a naturalistic bouquet of remarkable freshness. The marli is entirely covered in the famous Sèvres blue--deep and luminous--enhanced by a fine serrated gold border around the edge as well as a gold line highlighting the central design. The piece as a whole attests to the quality of craftsmanship and the expertise of the Sèvres porcelain manufactory in the mid-19th century. On the reverse, the
