Description

Free shipping for EU insurance included Christ at the Column or bound Christ, bronze after François Duquesnoy, 19th century Mounted on a square black marble base, this bronze depicts Christ at the moment of his scourging. His hands bound by a rope, Christ is portrayed with an elegantly proportioned body without compromising realism. He stands precariously balanced against a cylindrical column resting on a square pedestal. The entire bronze rests on a circular base attached to it. This bronze is the same model as the one exhibited at the National Gallery of Art (ref. 2007.150.2). <https://www.nga.gov/artworks/138842-christ-column> This museum also possesses an ivory version attributed to Duquesnoy himself (ref. 2007.67.1.). Excellent condition, light brown
