Description

Lalique France wheat-ear dish, Verneuil model, mid-20th-century Modernism. Created by the Lalique crystal works in France in the mid-20th century, this platter is adorned with a geometric and organic wheat ear design that stems from a logical continuation of Art Deco design principles. The Verneuil model features a classic circular crystal platter shape; the ears of wheat are grouped in the center like a fan, with rays of light streaming from them like jets of water from a fountain. In very good overall condition; some signs of wear (scratches, scuffs) are present, attesting to its use and authenticity. Fast and careful shipping to France, Europe, and worldwide.
