Description

A lovely 18th-century three-legged chocolate pot, a relatively rare piece, entirely shaped by hammer. It rests on three legs of the "crow's foot" type, adorned with cut-out clasps. Spout is built separately, while side handle, elegantly turned from wood, is secured by a beautiful riveted clasp. The lid, mounted on a cut-out hinge, features a shell-shaped thumb rest. On centre is a rotating stopper that allows a strainer to be inserted. This is a beautiful piece, particularly elaborate, combining functionality and high craftsmanship. Body is stamped with the "R" hallmark crowned with a wreath, attributed to Louis XV period. This hallmark, likely from the coppersmiths' guild, guaranteed quality of craftsmanship. Good overall condition: no holes, no dents; there is an old tin repair to hinge. A
