Description

A stunning little glass and silver bottle. The body of the bottle is made of thick blown glass. The exceptional mount is shaped like a parrot's head, with feathers from its neck cascading down onto the bottle's shoulder. The parrot depicted is likely a cockatoo, recognizable by the crest of feathers on top of its head. The carving and engraving are particularly well done. It features a small emery stopper, and the inside of the neck is lined with cork to ensure the bottle is airtight. I did not find a hallmark on the silver portion, but it was tested with a touchstone. A magnificent bottle, featuring this very rare and finely crafted bird-shaped design. 6.4 cm tall 2.5 cm wide at its widest point 40.4 grams gross weight Very good condition. Slight play in the lid, but it is securely locked and does not open on its own. In-person
