Description

Carved Wooden Saint Sebastian - 18th Century
This 18th-century polychrome wooden sculpture depicts Saint Sebastian in a particularly graceful style. The figure is depicted in an expressive, almost dancing pose, with his right arm raised and his left arm outstretched, creating a dynamic and light silhouette. Far from the classic image of agony, the young man's face remains gentle and serene, showing no sign of suffering. He wears a delicate wreath of golden flowers atop his carefully arranged curly hair. Girded with a gold-tinged cloth, the saint bears a reliquary crescent inlaid on his chest, attesting to his sacred role. A former officer of the Imperial Guard, Saint Sebastian is historically invoked as the great protector against the plague and epidemics. He also remains the patron saint of
