Description

A rare pair of French Vieux Paris porcelain perfume bottles attributed to the Jacob Petit manufactory, dating to the Louis Philippe period, c.1835-1845.

The bottles are decorated with a striking Bleu de Roi cobalt ground, gilded ornament and finely painted genre scenes after David Teniers the Younger (1610-1690). The lively tavern and dancing subjects reflect one of the most popular decorative traditions found on luxury French porcelain of the period.

The porcelain displays characteristic features associated with early nineteenth-century production, including a greyish-milk toned body, kiln specks from wood-fired manufacture and original contraction lines visible on the bases.

Both bottles retain their original porcelain
