Description

Pair of Empire-period mahogany bergère chairs, France, circa 1820-1830. An elegant pair of Empire-period mahogany armchairs, resting on tapered front legs and featuring remarkable armrests carved in the shape of swan necks, topped with finely chiseled stylized heads. The slightly sloping backs are crowned by a crossbar carved with plant motifs. The set retains the beautiful, understated, and balanced lines characteristic of Restoration-period furniture, which drew inspiration from the Empire style. The upholstery has been reupholstered in a sumptuous crimson red fabric featuring medallions and gilded foliage motifs, offering a particularly elegant contrast to the warmth of the mahogany. The seat cushions are removable. These wingback chairs will fit equally well in a classic interior or
