An 18th-century Paris Porcelain Serving Dish, Attributed To The Locré Manufactory

270 EUR

Signature : Manufacture de Locré, attribué à

Period : 18th century

Condition : Très bon état

Material : Porcelain

Description

Large porcelain serving dish with a polychrome design of floral bouquets, accented with fine gold-gilded scrollwork and palmettes. Numerous small flying insects adorn the rim. Paris porcelain; the platter is unsigned. It likely comes from the Manufacture de Locré, which produced floral motifs of this type featuring a consistent use of insects--often tiny--sometimes along the rim, as on our platter.The Manufacture de Locré was founded by Jean-Baptiste Locré in 1771, and he ran it until 1810.Our dish is in very good condition with no flaws or damage. The polychrome decoration is fresh, with some wear on the gold. Length: 38.5 cmWidth: 28.5 cm

Dealer

GSLR Antiques

French Antiques - 18th to 20th century.

Mobile : +33658910924

4 rue Vicat

Grenoble 38 000