Description

A powerfully expressive painting created by a skilled artist in the 1920s. The brushstrokes are perfectly controlled and balanced. The children's dark eyes lend intensity to their expressions, and the blue of the checkered shirt complements the brick-red tones of the background lines. Although unsigned, it bears in this canvas all the hallmarks of the "School of Paris"--the name given to the group of Jewish artists who arrived in France from Eastern Europe at the dawn of the 20th century, whose works were distinguished by a melancholic atmosphere and a strong sense of inner life. Unattributed oil on canvas in perfect condition. Dimensions: 61 x 50 cm unframed and 65.5 x 54.5 cm with its brown wooden frame and silver trim.
