Description

17th-century Westerwald / Raeren stoneware beer pitcher with cobalt blue decoration. This authentic, beautifully crafted Westerwald / Raeren stoneware pitcher dates from the 17th century. It features a traditional salt glaze and striking cobalt blue decoration. The vessel has an elegant pear-shaped body, a tall cylindrical neck, and a sturdy handle. Its surface is richly adorned with stamped medallions and a decorative frieze of lion heads around the neck, all enhanced by a vibrant cobalt blue glaze. The combination of gray stoneware and blue decoration is characteristic of the famous ceramic tradition of Westerwald or Raeren, in the Rhineland (Germany). The pitcher has a beautiful patina and retains all its decorative appeal. Signs of wear and minor imperfections reflect its age and attest to its
